

Communication with end-users has always been a focal point for SURFnet. Although SURFnet communicates through its contacts at the institutions, in the course of its 15-year existence, it has developed various activities to reach and inform its end-users directly. This presentation will discuss these activities in the past, present and future, as well as the lessons learned.