

This presentation will introduce and explain the issue of web site accessibility, and feature examples, case histories, and video footage from user testing with people with special needs. Information provided online can, and should, be made equivalently available to all users. Techniques exist that mean that discrimination against those with disabilities can be avoided. There are many reasons for providing universal access to information and services, not least because specific legislation addresses the issue.