

The recent democratisation of the P2P file sharing tools has entailed, on many networks, a considerable increase in the traffic, ascending as well as descending - and has even become a commercial argument for some ISPs. However, the point of view of academic networks is somewhat different: copyright violations, viral infections, bandwidth consumption are some of the many criteria that forced us to follow the development and dissemination of these applications.