

This presentation highlights the major achievements realised in the DataGrid project in general, and by the network work package in particular. In the first part, we show how the DataGrid Project has been able to develop, integrate and deploy grid middleware on a widespread production testbed. In the second part, we focus on specific network statements, and present the work of the network work package on transport services (QOS), monitoring and high-level functions for resource brokering.