

While the majority of staff and students continue to access network resources from a machine connected at a fixed location in an office or computer lab, there is a significant requirement to connect roaming and remote machines to the network. The Nomadic network aims to meet these new user demands by providing a secure and functional service in this demanding environment. Josh Howlett develops the service, while Nick Skelton provides end-user support.