Michael Gettes has recently moved to Duke University from Georgetown University where he played in a leading role for network and compute services development and deployment since August 1999. Previously, he played a similar role at Princeton University for over 10 years. He works closely with the Internet2 Middleware initiative and is a member of MACE working in the Directory/eduPerson, Shibboleth and HEPKI project areas. <gettes@duke.edu>