Damir Krstinic received his B.S. degree in 1999 from the Faculty of Electrical Engineering, Mechanical Engineering and Naval Architecture in Split, where he is currently working as teaching assistant and pursuing his M.Sc. degree in Computer Science. His research interests include data mining, distributed processing, pattern recognition, neural networks and classifier systems. <damir.krstinic@fesb.hr>

Ivan Slapnicar is professor of Mathematics at the University of Split, Croatia. He received his PhD from the Fernuniversiteat Hagen, Germany in 1992. His MSc is from the University of Zagreb, Croatia. His research interests focus on numerical linear algebra, numerical analysis and parallel comput ation. He is also active in development of web-based learning technologies.