

BIOGRAPHY

Matija Podravec is a young researcher at the School of Electrical Engineering and Computing, University of Zagreb, Croatia. In 2004, he joined a national “CroGrid” initiative, which gets together leading academic and industrial IT centers in Croatia. His research interests include distributed system design methodologies, Web services, service-oriented architecture and service-oriented programming model, and QoS. In cooperation with Ericsson Nikola Tesla and Croatian Ministry of Science, Education, and Sports, he participated in organization of workshop on design and development of parallel and distributed GRID and Internet applications held in July 2005 at School of Electrical Engineering and Computing.