

BIOGRAPHY

Jadranka Stojanovski graduated in Physics and has a Masters degree in Information Sciences. From 1997 she is head of the Ruđer Bošković Institute Library. She is working with introducing new library and information services for the research and academic community in Croatia.

Jadranka Stojanovski started the project Croatian Scientific Information System in 1994 which was active for ten years embracing special and academic libraries according subject field focusing on new services for library patrons. During this time Croatian Scientific Information System grew from 10 to 120 libraries and marked itself as one of the leading project within the LIS field. From 1995 to 2005 Jadranka Stojanovski is leader of the several project as CROSBİ – Croatian Scientific Bibliography (<http://bib.irb.hr>), Centre for Online Databases (<http://baze.szi.hr>), Who's Who in Science in Croatia (<http://tkojetko.irb.hr>) etc.

Since 1993 she is teaching Digital Libraries at J.J. Strossmayer University in Osijek. She is involved in the continuous education of librarians and users, and has taught different seminars on database retrieval, web searching, virtual libraries etc.

Jadranka Stojanovski has more than 40 publications.

Her main areas of interest are information retrieval, library organization and management, library automation, new information services in the library, libraries on the Web, electronic scholarly publishing, and digital library development;