Done

I kinda wanted it to be both to Naruto fans and people who may not like Naruto at all, simply because it was going to be aired to a room full of both.. So it had to be generic, non-spoilery, funny, and generally "yeah I'm using Naruto footage but it's good anyway" :p

Timing is my speciality so it is pretty heavily focussed on that; lipsyncing, punches connecting, things going boom, the usual. It foillows the original trailer reasonably closely for the most part, but diverges at the end because the voice parts had stopped and it was just a chance to show off some of the better sequences from Naruto; I've kinda specifically avoided the cheesier or less well animated scenes where I could.

To clarify, it's as much of a Naruto advertisement as it is a Matrix parody; you'll see what I mean at the end :P Even for such a popular series I like to at least show a few teaser scenes to make more people go see it..

This video won over the popularity vote and the Judges' decision at AmeCon 2004, and I was awarded a Rei-in-the-bathtub soap dish, yay;)

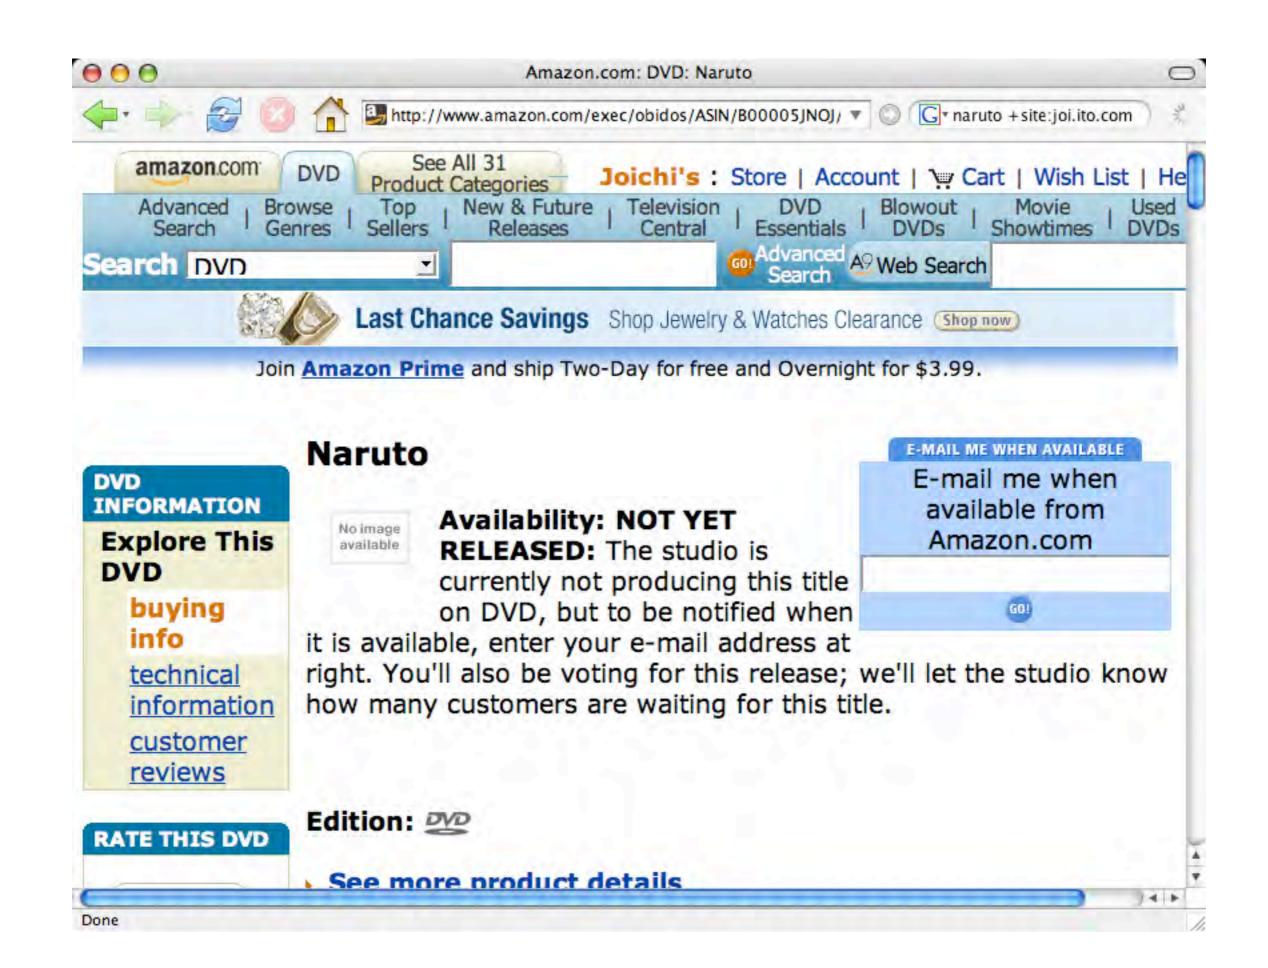

Also it was recently awarded Best Trailer in the Chinese Anti-Japan Protests

14:10 JST » Global Politics - Global Voices

There is a good blog post by Andrea about bloggers in China talking about the anti-Japan protests.

As a Japanese who has a great deal of sympathy and empathy for China, what I find difficult is trying to understand the various threads and how Japanese people can try to make a difference. In particular, the hateful and extreme actions of some of the Chinese make it difficult, if not scary to even try to open a dialog. At the same time, the extremes in China are fueling the nationalists in Japan and not helping the cause for the more moderate voices. I believe hate will never help communications.

One of the biggest problems is that most Japanese don't understand the issues. Another point is that most Japanese are not great supporters of the military. When I think about the military in Japan, I don't think dirty nationalist thoughts. Rather, I think about May 15, 1932 when Prime Minister Inukai was assassinated by the military which ended party-based politics in Japan until after WWII. I think about the Japanese military taking over the government and sending Japan into one of the worst periods in its history. I think about the small children being sent off to war as Kamikaze or human torpedos and I think about the letters homes from them that are enshrined in Yasukuni Shrine. There are letters from terrified little boys writing about how scared they are about going to war. Most Japanese do not trust the military and most Japanese believe that the military run government of the 30's was an illegitimate government as a result of a coup. Many Japanese believe that the Japanese people were victims of the military.

about is how we can do more to foster constructive dialogue online between bloggers in China and Japan . A constructive dialogue would be nice. Though I'd even consider fostering a hostile dialogue progress, so long as it meant a reduction in hacking and 'DNS atacks.' In Japan, it's hip to be square.:

A good post by Andrea on Global Voices about the Chinese Bloggers' Reactions on Recent Anti-Japan Protest couple days ago, then Joi Ito followed up a thoughtful post responding to the anti-Japanese demonstrations in China. Go through those 140 comments on joi's post will give us more understanding from different point of views, I suggest everybody to read it.

[IMG Dsc00186]Ever since I blogged about the anti-Japanese protests in China, I have been having a dialog with a number of people about Japanese history. One of my Chinese friends recommended "Hirohito and the Making of Modern Japan" (Herbert P. Bix) for a more objective and critical view of the Emperor's role in the War. I am

, Chinese textbook is also politicized. But why does Japan, a country with the freedom-of-speech, continue to teach a distorted history, which is valid only in Japan, provoking Chinese people's grief? As Joi Ito pointed out, Japanese education should be addressed to face the reality. I found many Japanese bloggers talked about the issue, depending on the misunderstandings and the ignorance. Actually, our understandings look much worse than Chinese bloggers'. I could 我是一同很同情中國立場的日本人、但我卻很難理解整個事情的脈絡、以及在這次運動中、日本究竟 可以做點什麼來改變現況呢? 尤其是當部份中國人做出如此充滿仇恨和極端的行為時, 使對話變得 困難、甚至使人害怕對話。同時、中國的極端行為亦使日本的民族主義者更激烈、使較溫和的聲音難 以冒起,我相信仇恨不能幫助溝通.

其中一個最大的問題是大部份日本人不明白問題出來那裡,大部份日本人並不是軍方的支持者.當我 面對日本的軍方,絕不會產生醜陋的民主主義思想,我會記起1932年5月15日,我們的國家總理 Inukai 被軍方暗殺,使日本的政黨政治終結,直到二次大戰完結後才恢復,我會記起日本軍方控制政 史. 我會想到小孩子被當作人肉炸彈送往戰場, 我會想起Yasukuni神舍亡

中国における反日抗議 from Joi Ito's Web

中国における反日抗議

反日抗議を訴えている中国国内のプロガー達について、Andreaが書いた素晴らしいプログ記 事がある。

中国に大いなる共感と関心を持つひとりの日本人として、それら様々な議論を理解すること、 日本人がどう対処できるかを考えること、は難しいと感じた。特に、何人かの中国人の敵意に 溢れた過激な行動には、対話することさえ怖くなる。同時に、中国における過激行動は、日本 の国粋主義者をあおり、適切な議論を生むのに役立っていない。憎しみは決してコミュニケー ションを生まないと、僕は信じる。

最も大きな問題の1つは、ほとんどの日本人がこの件を理解していないこと。もう1つのボイ ントは、ほとんどの日本人は軍隊の積極的な支持者でないこと。日本の軍隊を考えるとき、汚 い国粋主義的な考え方を、僕はしない。むしろ、第二次世界大戦後まで政党政治が途絶えるこ とになった、1932年5月15日の犬養首相の暗殺を考える。日本の軍隊が政府を乗っ取り、歴史 上、最悪の時へと突入していったことを考える。神風特攻隊や人間魚雷として戦争に送られた 小さな子供達のことを思い、靖国神社にまつられている人たちからの手紙について考える。お びえた少年達が、戦争に行くことがどれだけ恐ろしいかを書いた手紙が何通もある。ほとんど の日本人は軍隊を信じていないし、ほとんどの日本人は30年代の軍事政府は、クーデターの結 果生まれた非合法の政府であったと信じている。多くの日本人は、日本国民は軍隊の犠牲者で あったと信じている。
